Continuing, the Intelligencer's informant stated that he knew of several out-of-the-state companies which will withdraw from West Virginia now that the valued policy act becomes a law. As they look at' it, there will be no profit in insurance here, more especially in the rural districts, where the opportunity is now offered any unscrupulous person to over-insure and defraud the companies carrying his insurance. It is said the Wheeling companies will cancel their risks on rural property throughout West Virginia, owing to the passage of the valued insurance bill. The only official of a local company who could be seen last night was Secretary Fidelius Riester, of the German Fire Insurance Company, who said his company would withdraw from the 'rural field in this state.

could wish; but now we find at the very outset that the greatest need of the law to make it effective, was voted down. What is the ues of any law with no officers authorized to enforce it? It looks as though our legislators are willing to put on our statute books a conpulsory law, providing it will not compel attendance. It looks as though somebody is trying to play fast and loose in this matter; indeed it looks as though there were opponents to compulsory law, if there is no harm in it as far as compelling attendance is concerned. Sometimes one is compelled to think that compulsory attendance at school ten, fifteen and twenty years ago would have been a great help to our legislatures of today. Those who are so afraid that the personal rights of the dear people will be taken away, or that the family circle can be invaded by the truant officer, surely do not reflect before saying it. If a parent sends his child to school, or gives it all the educational facilities necessary at home he will not be interfered with at all, only those who refuse to do this. The child is not responsible, it cannot be, but it has its rights that must be respected, and if we do not as a people see that it gets them, we will be the sufferers.

Since writing the above there has appeared in the course of the latest them is a people see that it gets them, we will be the sufferers.

Since writing the above there has appeared in the columns of the Intelligencer an article from the pen of Prof. C. E. Carrigan, principal of the Central school, Benwood, in which almost the same opinion is taken of the recent action of the legislature in refusing to amend the law to make it more effective. This is not surprising though, for every true friend of popular education can have but one opinion on a matter of such vital importance. If our legislators would pay more attention to matters for the general good, and less to the securing the passage of some pet measure of their own, it would be more to their credit, and much better for the general good of the entire state.

The writer has before him the message of J. M. Devine, governor of North Dakota, to the legislature which began its session January 4, 1899. While the entire message is good, the part relating to public schools is especially to the point. Governor Devise below on the source of the restance of the columns of the intermets in the payou noticed their statements in the payor and recomposed of the very best derugs the ward are composed of the very best derugs the market affords. The talk was given to the pupils of the higher rooms of Ritchie school yesterday afternoon by Superintendent Anderson. His theme was Washington, and although one would think that nothing new could be said concerning his great name and greater deeds, yet the talk yesterday was greatly enjoyed. He gave many incidents that are not generally given in the history of that illustrious personage. He closed his talk by giving an acount of a visit to Mt. Vernon by himself some years ago. This part of the talk was greatly enjoyed by both pupils and tenchers. Take it all in all the entire afternoon exercise was enjoyed very much. These talks are especially productive in good from the fact that the boys and girls are taking a greater interest in the history of the times when these persons lived. The history of a nation is but the history of the great men and the great men it has produced. Miss Kalbitzer's plano solo was loudly applauded.

It was a great disappointment that the lecture of Dr. Raymond had to be postponed again, but it will be enjoyed all the better when we get to hear it. Dr. Raymond is still kept in Charleston in the interest of the university, and it is the wish of the writer that he may get everything he desires for the success of the school. The time is coming when a state will be judged by the standing of its university. It is even here now, and from the strides qur leading school has been making during the past few years, it surely speaks well both for the state and for the president and professors of the school. May the time never come when the people of West Virginia do anything to retard the work of our university.

PARSONS IN TROUBLE.

Wheeling Young Man Arrested at Steubenville Yesterday on a Serious Charge—Charged with Complicity in Shooting a Man There.

Colonel W. W. Arnett last night re ceived a telegram from Steubenville stating that Arthur Parsons, formerly of this city, and a son of J. H. Parsons deceased, long a prominent Wheeling photographer, was in trouble there, and asking for his legal services. The colonel will go to Steubenville to-day A story was in circulation here last night that young Parsons had shot his step-father, but this was without foun-dation. The story of the difficulty is told in last evening's Steubenville Herald-Star, as follows:

Leonard Anderson, a well known citizen, residing on Church street, near Market, had a thrilling experience with Market, had a thrilling experience with three strange characters about 4 o'clock this morning, which resulted in one of the men drawing a 38-calibre revolver and shooting Mr. Anderson in the left limb, above the ankle, inflicting a painful and perhaps serious wound.

About 3:30 this morning Mrs. Anderson was awakended from her slumbers by loud knocking at the front deor, and calling to know who was there, was answered by a gruff voice demanding admittance. The lady again inquired who was at the door and what was wanted, and was again ordered to "open the door and then she would see." By this time Mr. Anderson had been awakened by the racket, and hastily dressing, opened the front door, which leads out onto a porch. There in the darkness stood three men, strangers to Mr. Anstood three men, strangers to Mr. An son made a move as if to put his demand into execution.

The men stepped off the porch into the yard, and before anything else had been said one of them pulled a revolver and fired at Mr. Anderson, the ball taking effect in the limb above the ankle.

When the shot was fired Mrs. Anderson screamed and the men ran out of the yard and up toward Market street. In the meantime a young son of Mr. Anderson, with rare nerve, hastily dressed, and on finding that his father had been shot, started to follow the gang, and if possible cause their arrest. The boy ran out to Market street in time to see three men walking up the Pan Handle platform, and running to the Imperial hotel he telephoned for the police. In a few minutes Edgerly, Mercer, Dunn and Connor were at the depot, and the men answering to the description of Mr. Anderson were arrested and locked up.

They of course denied that they had done any shooting, but on one of them, giving his name as Lewis Marshland, was found a 33-callibre revolver with one chamber empty. The other two fellows gave the names of A. G. Person (probably Parsons) and Charles Emerson.

Two satchels and a heavy paper box forwardly Parsons)) and Charles Emerson.

Two satchels and a heavy paper box belonging to the men were taken to the mayor's office. The box contained several dozen of empty half pint whisky flasks and several full bottles of whisky, and the police explain that the men are evidently traveling speak-easies who were en route to the oil fields. The men also had in their possession a number of conductor's checks, two revolvers and letters, but no burglar tools were found.

The mayor questioned the men, but they could give no plausible account of themselves other than that they stopped off a train from Pittsburgh, intending to go to Scio to-day.

It is supposed they started out early this morning to have a big time, but made a mistake by getting into the wrong house when they went to Mr. Anderson's. And the reckless manner in which the shooting was done stamps them as dangerous characters.

The men were sont to fall to await.

The men were sent to jail to await the result of Mr. Anderson's injuries, in default of $1.000 bond.

the result of Mr. Anderson's injuries, in default of $1,000 bond.

Mr. Anderson was resting easy this afternoon, but Dr. Podlewski, the attending surgeon, says the wound may prove dangerous from complications. The ball struck the shin bone hard enough to splinter the bone, and there is danger of inflammation. The hall was taken out of the back part of the leg, where it lodged after striking the bone and passing around it.

The affair has caused much indignation, and it is hoped the evidence against the villains is such that will lead to their punishment.

Says They Told a "Sober Truth."

One day, perhaps a year ago, my husband, who is a physician, handed me a package of Postum Foed Coffee, and requested that I make a very careful test of it.

Realizing the importance, I gave it my especial attention in preparation, and when it was served, it exceeded our expectations. It came to the table steaming with a delicious aroma, and the first taste convinced me that I had found the long sought beverage.

We had some experience with various so-called "substitutes" for coffee, only to find them worthless-mixtures of cheap coffee and other things that we could not use in our own family, and of course the doctor didn't care to have his patients use them, but with Postum it is different. I occasionally hear of Postum being served weak and flat but that never occurs when time enough is allowed in boiling to bring out the flavor. Dr. now tells me that he takes pleasure in prescribing Postum to many of his patients who have found that coffee acts' injuriously, causing nervousness, headeches and deranged digestion. These symptoms, tum to many of his patients who have found that coffee acts injuriously, causing nervousness, headaches and deranged digestion. These symptoms, he says, in a still more aggravated form, effect thousands of tea drinkers who 'would gain immeasurably in health and hapiness if they would banish that seductive herb from the supper table and replace it with Postum Food Coffee.

When we first began to use Postum, we indulged in some merriment at the red seal on the package, and the statement that "It Makes Red Blood." It was not long, however, before we learned that it was a sober truth. My family remarked the growing color in my face. My weight steadily increased, to such a degree that I was forced to ascribe the change to the use of Postum, and my entire family have now become addicted to the beverage.

Ten Cents a Week.

Wheeling insurance men, including state companies, expressed their suring of the action of Governor Atkinson in allowing the vicious valued policy bill to become a law through the with-holding of his approval. From what the governor had told the insurance men who went to Charleston to fight the bill, they felt well assured that he would never allow it to be entered upon

What to do with the Philippine isyears past, and it creates no excitement in the secular press, at least, and that question is, how to get all our boys and girls into our schools. Provisions are made for the education of every child in the state while but about 75 per cent of them are receiving the benefits of the provision—not more than 50 per cent of the boys of Wheeling are remaining in school until they reach the grammar grades even; and yet we go on year after year, with our criminal list if not increasing, growing no less, and we won-reasing, growing no less, and we won-

The writer was led to pen the above school law in order to make it more effective. All who have made the law a study as it was passed two years ago, must admit that while it is a start in the right direction, it is very defective in its provisions. It was as good as they could get at that time and future legislatures would amend it so that it would do all that its most ardent advocates could wish; but now we find at, the very outset that the greatest need of the law to make it effective, was voted down. What is the ues of any law with no officers authorized to enforce it? The writer has before him the message of J. M. Devine, governor of North Dakota, to the legislature which began its session January 4, 1899. While the entire message is good, the part relating to public schools is especially to the point. Governor Devine being an Eighth ward boy, we all feel a pride in his success and the great state of North Dakota is to be congratulated on having so able a man at the head of her affairs. In everything that goes toward the greatest good of the greatest number Governor Devine is outspoken. He is in favor of taking no backward step in anything that ennobles and uplifts the people.
